RESHOW is an empirical comment on abundance with focus on waste from exhibitions.

An organic waste management system implying:

- coordination
- selection
- recollection
- refit
- catalogue
- storage
- reallocation

RESHOW promotes reuse, and development of non commercial cultural initiatives with constant collaboration between producers.

RESHOW leads to expand possibilities of appropriation and resignification of everyday life and its debris, core topics of antipodes café's oeuvre.

Reallocation & reuse free of charge for any non commercial cultural initiative (after reuse new debris may be created that can become part of the system again, and again...)

Workshops & special cases antipodes café may arrange workshops with collaborators and institutions, for both analysis and/or reuse of selected debris from specific exhibitions.

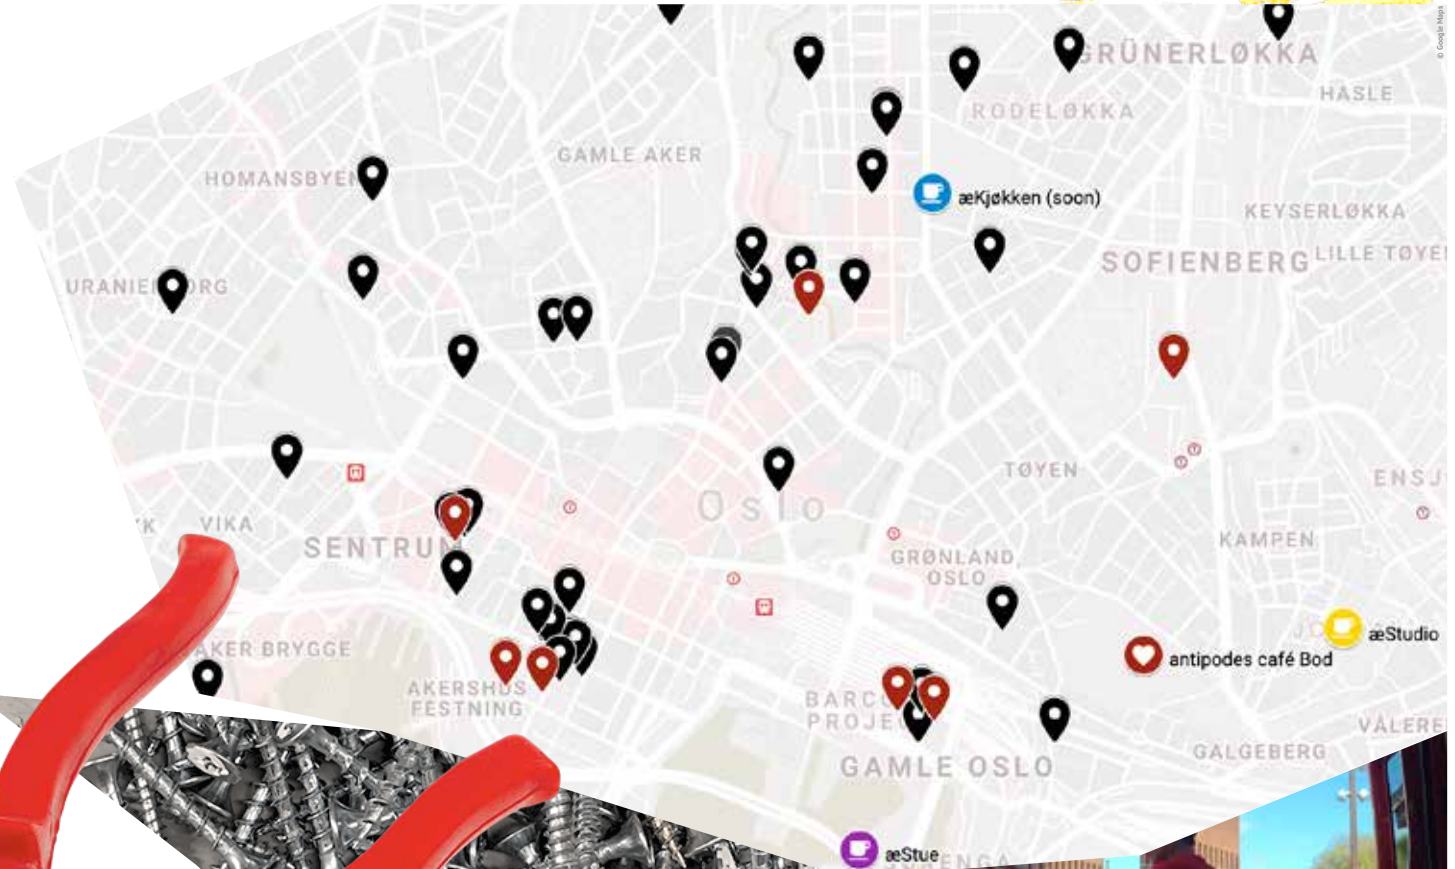

materials & transport

Before mounting or dismounting an exhibition at a private or public institution, antipodes café coordinates for defining all those specific materials that can be taken for reuse, instead of becoming garbage.

Debris from exhibitions include a wide range of materials such as: wooden panels, pedestals, displays, frames, rests of paint, screws, carpets, banners and diverse printed materials, acrylics, but also screens, projectors, lighting, audio systems, tools and so many more things that can be easily reused.

On many occasions, demounting teams do not count with enough time to treat materials with care for a possible reuse, so antipodes café may participate actively in the demounting process, by picking materials in diverse sizes and conditions.

Cleaning, repairing, polishing edges and removing screws and imperfections are activities proper of refitting stage.

Aiming coherence in all aspects of the project, transport of all materials, is mostly done with cargo vehicles from collaborative initiatives.

In addition, in 2019 Oslo kommune supported the acquisition of a cargo bike.

digital inventory

After classification, a digital inventory helps to visualize all materials, and it allows registered users to select available materials and to schedule an appointment for picking them at the storage.

In addition, this catalogue includes a label system, helping antipodes café to keep a clear order of the storage.

After any material is reused in any kind of non commercial cultural initiative—such as exhibitions, urban interventions, cultural spaces, artworks, festivals—registered users may send comments and images of their creations, to be published on this online platform for tracing the history of the materials and inspiring others to reuse.

storage: æBod

AKEBERGVEIEN 9, OSLO

From early 2019, the storage is called antipodes café Bod (æBod), and it takes part in the project æHouse.

The interior design of these two red containers is evolute, and made just with debris materials from exhibitions (wood, screws, lights, cables, paint...100% debris).

This construction mutates during open workshops (Sundays 1-3pm) for promoting the reuse of materials. Activity arranged with the participation of a guest artist/carpenter. Kids are welcome too, and with them we focus in reusing all these materials for a temporary playground, as the one of the area got trapped inside the construction site of the refurbishment of the Oslo Prison.

As simple as to put back to work something with same intended function or a new one, giving a new life and meaning to an existing object. Reusing materials demands a playful level of creativity, inviting to re-formulate ideas according to possibilities.

To reuse is not to recycle. Recycling demands an “industrial” change to a product to turn it back into raw materials for the manufacture of new products.

Reusing materials instead of working with new ones, prevents pollution caused by reducing the need to harvest new raw materials or to recycle, saving lot of energy and reducing greenhouse gas emissions that contribute to global climate change, and amount of space of landfills and of other destinations, such as gyres of marine debris in world’s oceans.

With a transdisciplinary and holistic approach, antipodes café traverse creative industries focusing on the meticulous creation of site specific ephemeral relational platforms in resignified contexts towards infinite possibilities of interaction between strangers.

In past years, antipodes café has carried out hundreds of multifarious autonomous cultural initiatives on a wide range of topics, medias, moments and contexts, from Longyearbyen to Kristiansand, and abroad in Berlin, Brasília, Buenos Aires, Gwangju, Lahti, Llanwrtyd Wells, Madrid, Montevideo, Punta del Este, San Sebastián, Säynätsalo and Zarautz.

Activities including urban interventions, site specific artworks, situations, installations and performances; solo and collective exhibitions, workshops, lectures, classes and symposiums; curatorial work, informal gatherings, relational events, and all their production, management and communication processes, with emphasis on the latter, as much as on any results.

antipodes café works without commercial purposes and each of its initiatives has independent economic plans. Thus, members vary according to each case. The sustainability of the organization and its projects is based on logistical, material and economic support from both public and private sectors.

Resignification –of materials, ideas, moments and places– is one of the intrinsic qualities of antipodes café, as well as the reduction environmental impact and costs due to lateral thinking, strategic design, and reuse of ideas and materials.
